Room 15

In Maths in Room 15 we have been learning about Volume and Capacity. The students had to create a cylinder that they think would hold the most capacity. They were given an A4 piece of paper and tested their designs using counters. We then poured popcorn into their cylinders and weighed how much popcorn/ capacity their designs could hold. Our winner was Katie! Students then looked at how we can measure the volume of a 3D object. They were given 10 uni-fix cubes and had to create as many different shapes and measure the volume, perimeter and area. They all did a fantastic job and did lots of new learning.

Autism Inclusion News

Strength & Interest-based Approach

In an autism learning session, we have learnt that, to support students on the autism spectrum (and any other students), we need to use the student's strengths and interests. When the students feel that the teachers know their strengths and interests, it reinforces their relationships. Also, the students are more engaged in their learning.

This week, I would like to share 3 films I have come across in autism training. These films portray an autistic person and are inspiring! They highlight that their strengths and passion support them through life and lead to success, as well as talk about the challenges they face everyday.

"Temple Grandin (PG)" -

Based on a true story, Temple Grandin becomes one of the top scientists in the humane livestock handling industry, and an autism spokesperson".

"Life Animated (PG)" - A documentary about Owen Suskind who communicates and makes sense of the world through Disney movies.

"Wizard Mode (M)" - A documentary about Robert Gagno who is one of the top ten pinball players in the world. If you have any questions or concerns, please come and have a chat anytime.

Parent Survey
